Contents

Preface viii

1. Ecologies of rock art 1
   A dynamic and inclusive perspective 2
   From art to articulation: visual and material agency 2
   From multispecies to multi-entity archaeology 4
   An ontological inquiry: animism, magic and the transcendent 5
   Rock art as a vitalist technology? 7
   About the book 7
2. The rock art of the Mälaren Bay 9
   Defining the study area 9
   Distribution and documentation of the Mälaren rock art 9
   Chronology of the rock art 12
   The region to the south of Mälaren 14
   The region north of Mälaren 30
   Regional trends and patterns in the rock art of the Mälaren district 44
   Local densities, frequencies and representation 45
   Distribution of sites over time and space 46
3. Organisation and articulation of the motifs 49
   The cupmarks 49
   The boat motif 54
   Anthropomorphs (and body parts) 58
   Podomorphs (dressed and naked feet) 63
   The zoomorphic figures 66
   Circular motifs 73
   Miscellaneous motifs: weapons/tools, trees and mantle figures 78
   Rock art motifs on other medialities and in other contexts 79
   Chronology and distribution of the main motifs in the Mälaren region 83
   Organisation, design and articulation of the main motifs 84
4. Modes of articulation 87
   Mode I: Partial and incomplete motifs 87
   Mode II: Petroglyphs in process: palimpsests and subsequent enactments 91
   Mode III: Large-scale and hyperbolic motifs 94
   Mode IV: Material enactments 100
   Summary: modes of articulation and the enactments of rock art 110

5. Rock art as a vitalist technology 111
Petroglyphs as petrofacts 111
I: Enacting relations to water: boats as object-beings 115
II: Anthropomorphs and podomorphs as lures and traps 122
III: The zoomorphic petroglyphs – regenerating and evoking? 126
IV: Cupmarks and grooves as hydromantic devices 130
Bronze Age petroglyphs as vitalist devices? 131
6. The Mälaren rock art in perspective 135
Rock art by numbers: frequencies and rate of production 135
The Mälaren region in southern Scandinavia 138
The Mälaren region in Eurasia: a wider perspective 143
Consequences for interpretation 147
The emergence and demise of Mälaren rock art 149
7. Conclusion 153

References 157